

A rough visualization of the entire system is shown in the following diagram. All portions of the Calendar application are constantly communicating with one another to provide continuous updates to your friends' events and whether or not they've accepted your invites or you've accepted theirs.

